A Note from Mrs. Hoen

Every year our students take a variety of assessments to determine their skill levels for their particular grade level. Some of the assessments you may be familiar with are PALS, STAR Reading, iReady, ACCESS, W-APT, CogAt, and of course CMAS. Most of these tests cover at length math and language arts content. Not all students take all of these tests. The state specifically reports back on CMAS as these are the more heavily weighted high stakes tests.

Our teachers and students did a superb job last year and performed well. We do have areas to improve upon but overall we are doing well. Aurora Academy’s “School Performance Framework”, or SPF, has been released by the state. This report determines a performance rating for the entire school based on several data points pulled from our spring CMAS results. The state looks at student achievement and student growth.

What ratings are used?

Aurora Academy has a Performance rating again for the 2018-2019 school year. As you can see that is the highest rating we can achieve. If you would like to hear more about this report and more specific information about our CMAS results, please come to the first School Accountability meeting (SAC) on Thursday, September 26th from 3:45-4:45 in the ____________.

Also, please don’t forget to schedule a conference time with your teacher(s). Fourth and 5th grade teachers will hand out CMAS reports during conferences. Middle school students’ reports are being mailed home.

Frequently Asked Questions

What exactly does a school counselor do?

My services are available to all students. It is my job to make sure that students are happy and doing their best at school. This is a tall order since so many factors go into kids doing well—their ability to focus and pay attention, their relationships with peers and teachers, how well they can manage their feelings and impulses, and their lives outside of school. I can address these issues using individual or small group counseling, as well as

Will you notify me if you see my child?

In building relationships with all students, I speak with them often, and if it is concerning a relatively minor issue such as an argument I may not notify you unless there is a safety concern. However, if the worry or problem is significant, I

How are you different from a therapist outside counselor?

I frequently see children just once or twice, or in the classroom setting rather than my office. Although I do often help children with family problems and behavior at home, my primary role is to deal with school related problems. Sometimes an

Friday Prize Drawing is a weekly drawing for students who have earned SOAR slips. Slips from every grade level are chosen from the box at random and announced over the school intercom first thing Friday morning. The winners will be asked to come to the front office to pick a prize and get their picture taken. Those student’s SOAR slip and picture will be hung on the “Soaring Student” board in the hallway outside the lunchroom throughout that month, and then returned to the student to take home.

Counseling Corner:

Please take a moment and complete a beginning of the year needs assessment that will help communicate any changes or specific needs of your student(s)/family. Your information and feedback will also help to guide the counseling program and services for this school year. How much screen time is OK for my kid(s)?

Kids are spending more time with screen media -- and at younger ages -- than ever before. In an effort to help families curb kids’ use, groups such as the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) and the World Health Organization (WHO) have released numerical screen limit guidelines, but the reality is that there really is no magic number that's “just right.” What’s more important is the quality of kids' media, how it fits into your family’s lifestyle, and how you engage your kids with it.

The idea of screen time as a one-dimensional activity is changing -- even the AAP, whose screen time rules had been strictly age-based, is recognizing that not all screen time is created equal. Computers, tablets, and smartphones are multipurpose devices that can be used for lots of purposes. Even so, the World Health Organization is sticking with specific screen time amounts on the theory that sedentary activities such as playing computer games is contributing to the global obesity epidemic. However, designating device use simply as “screen time” can miss some important variations. The Common Sense Census: Media Use by Tweens and Teens identifies four main categories of screen time.

- Passive consumption: watching TV, reading, and listening to music
- Interactive consumption: playing games and browsing the Internet
- Communication: video-chatting and using social media
- Content creation: using devices to make digital art or music

Clearly, there’s a lot of differences among these activities. But as valuable as many of them can be, it's still important for kids’ overall healthy development to balance their lives with enriching experiences found off screens. These tips can help:

- Pay attention to how your kids act during and after watching TV, playing video games, or hanging out online. If they're using high-quality, age-appropriate media; their behavior is positive; and their screen-time activities are balanced with plenty of healthy screen-free ones, there’s no need to worry.
- If you’re concerned about heavy media use, consider creating a schedule that works for your family. This can include weekly screen-time limits, limits on the kinds of screens kids can use, and guidelines on the types of activities they can do or programs they can watch. Make sure to get your kids' input so the plan teaches media literacy and self-regulation, and use this as an opportunity to discover what they like watching, introduce new shows and apps for them to try, or schedule a family movie night.

The reality is that most families will go through periods of heavy and light media use, but, so long as there’s a balance, kids should be just fine.

Dear Parents and Families,

Reading for pleasure unlocks the power of information and imagination and helps children discover who they are. Here’s what you can do to help children develop stronger reading skills and a love for reading:

- Set the example. Let children see you read.
- Have a collection of books in your home. Update this collection routinely to keep up with changing tastes and reading skills.
- Support our school’s Book Fair. Allow your children to choose their own books to read.

Our Scholastic Book Fair is a reading event that brings the books kids want to read right into our school. It’s a wonderful selection of engaging and affordable books for every reading level. Please make plans to visit our Book Fair and be involved in shaping your child’s reading habits.

Book Fair dates: September 16th - 19th
Shopping hours: School Hours (including parent/teacher conference evenings)

We hope to see you and your family at our Book Fair! Remember, all purchases are tax free and proceeds benefit our school library.

Sincerely,

Michele M. Combret
